Weeks Roses improves visibility into inventory and orders with Dynamics 365 Business Central

Weeks Roses, a wholesale rose grower, migrated its systems from Dynamics NAV to Dynamics 365 Business Central to gain better visibility into their inventory and real-time access to information on mobile devices.

Business challenges:

- Faced data visibility challenges caused by multiple locations, disparate systems, and on-premises servers.
- Outdated legacy systems led to business problems such as delayed invoices and sales orders versus inventory count discrepancies.
- Needed better account inventory planning for annual orders that are placed six to nine months in advance, even though planning for crops happens a year or two in advance.

Business benefits of Dynamics 365 Business Central

Seamlessly integrate and update hundreds of thousands of sales orders, inventory lists, and shipping reports into Business Central.

Fast return on investment

By providing greater visibility, Business Central empowers Weeks Roses to reap the benefits only one-month post-migration – including streamlined processes, greater security, and more transparent operations. Cloud-based system allows employees to work remotely and securely access their data.

"I think that Business Central is going to be a complete asset for our company. Within six months, it is going to be our lifeline."

Tina Brown, Lead Systems Analyst

Customer Testimonials

"Business Central has given us a lot more visibility into our data."

Leif Stoa, VP of Finance
Farnam Street Financial

"I really like the ability to upload multiline journal entries—and not just upload them into the system—but apply multidimensions to each transaction, and the ability to do batch uploads that facilitate our monthly revenue reporting and analysis as well."

Clayton Haynes, CFO
Super League Gaming
